

Comment Regarding
Docket # 00-168

The Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) recommendation following the recommendation of the Information Needs of Communities (INC) is the next logical step in bringing full disclosure of this into this age.

Making this information that is regulated to be available for public consumption readily available, accessible, and understandable, is intrinsic to the spirit of the requirement to provide disclosure. It is our hope that the FCC recommendation will stand as is.

Left to themselves, those required to disclose information to the public may not necessarily favor doing so in such a way that really amounts to full disclosure to the public. Having the information on the internet would also provide a way to confirm that the information is indeed correct since the source can be checked by anyone with internet access.
